

Economic and Financial Analyst

Location: Washington, DC

About the position

Castalia is seeking candidates to fill a position as an Analyst. The Analyst will be responsible for economic and financial analysis of publicly and privately financed infrastructure and public-private partnerships (PPPs). The Analyst will produce reports and presentations for clients. The team works across sectors, so the analyst will be exposed to work in the transportation, power, water, and environmental sectors in developing markets and North America. The position is full-time.

Who we're looking for

Individuals who meet the following qualifications will be considered for the position:

Required

- A strong grasp of microeconomics and corporate finance
- Native-level fluency in English
- Excellent research and analytical skills, and an ability to apply theory to real world problems
- Proficiency in Microsoft Excel, including the use of logical formulas, lookups, pivot tables, etc.
- An ability to synthesize complex issues clearly and concisely in written English
- Professionalism and self-motivation, including an ability to:
 - Work well in a team
 - Learn quickly and take initiative to teach oneself needed skills
 - Take professional ownership of the work being undertaken
- Willingness and desire to travel internationally in line with Covid-19 travel restrictions, no more than 10 percent of the time
- Work authorization in USA

Candidates who meet the required criteria will be preferred if they also possess the following skills and experience.

Preferred

- Strong grasp of corporate finance, project finance, or accounting
- Demonstrated proficiency in building financial models
- Experience in consulting or working for a financial institution or development bank
- Professional or native proficiency of French, Russian, or Arabic
- A graduate degree

How to apply

If you're interested in this position, please click the button below to fill out and submit your application form to us.

Only fully completed applications can be submitted. You won't be able to save your progress once you've started an application, so please have the following information and documents ready:

- Cover letter
- Resume/CV
- Two professional references
- Writing sample
- Transcripts