

Senior Economic and Financial Analyst

Location: Washington, DC

About the position

Castalia is seeking candidates to fill a position as a Senior Analyst with a focus on infrastructure (especially transport, energy, water, and climate change resilience) projects in developing countries. The Analyst will be responsible for economic and financial analysis and modelling for public-private partnerships (PPPs) and traditionally financed infrastructure. The Analyst will also be responsible for producing written and presentations to clearly and concisely communicate the results of the analysis and modelling to clients. The position is full-time.

Who we're looking for

Individuals who meet the following qualifications will be considered for the position:

Required

- A MA/MS in finance or economics and/or an MBA
- A strong grasp of microeconomics
- Native-level fluency in English
- Excellent research and analytical skills, and an ability to apply theory to real world problems
- Proficiency in Microsoft Excel, including the use of logical formulas, lookups, pivot tables, etc.
- Experience building financial models (i.e. containing all three financial statements)
- An ability to synthesize complex issues clearly and concisely
- Professionalism and self-motivation, including an ability to:
 - Work well in cross-cultural environments
 - Work well in a team
 - Learn quickly and take initiative while working with limited supervision
 - Take ownership of the work being undertaken

- Willingness and desire to travel internationally in line with Covid-19 travel restrictions, no more than 25 percent of the time
- Work authorization in USA

Preferred

- Strong grasp of corporate finance and project finance
- Relevant work experience in the transport, energy, water, or climate resilience sectors, specifically related to utilities or public-private partnerships
- Experience in consulting or working for a financial institution
- At least 2 years' work experience (post graduate school)
- Professional or native proficiency of French, Russian, or Arabic

How to apply

If you're interested in this position, please click the button below to fill out and submit your application form to us.

Only fully completed applications can be submitted. You won't be able to save your progress once you've started an application, so please have the following information and documents ready:

- Cover letter
- Resume/CV
- Two professional references
- Writing sample
- Transcripts